Risks and rules

The risks

A working farm has risks, including:

- Bites, kicks, scratches and knock-downs from animals, even calm ones
- Germs animals carry, which can make people sick, children most of all
- Uneven ground, holes, mud and stalks in fields and mazes
- Falls and jolts on hayrides and wagons
- Tractors, trucks and farm equipment moving nearby
- Thorns, insects, bee stings, ponds and creeks
- Weather, heat, and hay, pollen and dust that can set off allergies

I understand these risks, and others no one can foresee, and that some remain even when the staff and other guests take care. I choose to take part.

Initials _____

Farm rules

- Stay on paths and in the areas that are open to visitors.
- Wash your hands after touching animals and before you eat.
- Keep children within reach around animals, ponds and equipment.
- Stay seated on hayrides, with hands and feet inside the wagon.
- Don't climb on equipment, hay bales or fences unless the farm sets them up for it.
- No smoking or open flames in fields, barns or mazes.

I'll follow these rules and every instruction from the staff. The staff may stop me or ask me to leave if I don't.
